

THE YODEL

COMING SOON! A NEW LOOK...

What lies behind us and what lies before us are tiny matters compared to what lies within us

--Ralph Waldo Emerson

Thanks to a term coined by Rik A, I've become an "Armchair Mountaineer". At least for the time being. On March 19, I underwent ACL (anterior cruciate ligament) replacement surgery on my right leg. This surgery was a result of having gone skiing in February for the first time in two years, and completely wiping out.

My husband Ivar and I had managed to get a day to ourselves leaving our daughter in the care of her loving and very eager Aunt. We couldn't wait to hit the slopes. We were in Oregon visiting family, and thought that we'd give Mt. Hood Meadows a try. I could not wait to don my ski gear and head to the first lift. It was an easy green run and figured that was a good enough warm up. We spent the rest of the morning skiing down intermediate blue runs and enjoying every exhilarating second. At one point, we took a chair that brought us into this white abyss. It was a total white-out. We gingerly pushed off the chair and had no idea what was up or down. We literally could not tell the ground from the sky. I started getting dizzy and queasy and wondered how we were going to get down safely. Thankfully, there were wands along the way as we descended and eventually we came out of the fog. It was a mind-numbing yet some-what thrilling experience. We decided it was time to break for lunch. After some very greasy and overpriced pizza in the lodge, we headed back out.

It had started snowing and was getting cold. We bundled up and headed back to the lifts. By this time, my out of "skiing" shape muscles decided enough was enough.

I was happily skiing along, when some invisible force snagged my ski and down I went. I don't totally recall what happened, but I do know that when it was over, I was facing up hill with both skis still on. My bindings had not released.

So here I sit in recovering from knee surgery. I am comforted by the knowledge that OSAT is here for me. As I heal, I look forward to the coming months of hiking, bike-riding, camping and general fun that this club has to offer!

KCM & DS--Marina S., Editor e-mail: sandsmar@sprynet.com The next deadline for The Yodel is May 1.

Within the requirements of the by-laws, Club business will be discussed and acted upon at the BOTS meetings. Business requiring general membership participation will be brought to the Club meetings. Minutes of the BOTS meeting and Club meeting will (hopefully) be published jointly in the following Yodel.

THE ARMCHAIR MOUNTAINEER

by Rik A

The Jimmy D Hinkhouse Memorial Library is OPEN FOR BUSINESS! The BOTS approved operating procedures and policies last month, and items have begun circulating. The policies and the lists are available at <http://www.geocities.com/yosemite/2899/osatlib.html>. For those who aren't connected to cyberspace, here are the basics.

Portions of the collection will be brought to monthly club meetings. The OSAT Bookmobile (currently a gold Volvo) will operate after most Sunday morning Tiger Mountain meetings in the main parking lot. The entire collection is available for browsing by calling Rik at 206-232-8908. A library "open house" will be held now and then if there is interest, probably on Sunday afternoons.

A list of all the books is available by request, but if you have internet access, the lists there are easier to read. Beginning next month, I will list some of the books in this column. Use the "reserve" system: call or email me and I will arrange to get the book you want to you.

An individual may check out a maximum of two books and four magazines at a time. Items are due by the end of the month following the month they are checked out. One renewal for one additional month will be granted unless a reserve request for the book is on record.

Materials must be physically returned to the Librarian before being loaned to others. The member whose name is on the checkout card is responsible for its return to the Librarian. This policy is intended to help maintain the integrity of the collection, develop accurate circulation data, and assures fairness to members who have reserves on books.

There are no fees for using the library, and no fines for overdue materials. Borrowers with overdue material will be notified once by the Librarian by phone, mail, or email. A person with overdue material may not check out other materials, and members with materials overdue for more than 3 months must return them or pay for replacement prior to renewing their OSAT membership. Replacements must be of equal or better quality than the item lost.

Jimmy's library is the single largest physical club asset. It is my hope that every OSATer takes advantage of this resource. Since "opening for business", I have already accepted additional materials donated to the library. Because of OSAT's IRS 501(c)(3) status, your donation may be tax deductible!

Keep climbing mountains (vicariously), and don't fall asleep!

Five Years Ago in OSAT

by Rik A

Winter 1993 closed out with Dave N leading eight OSATers on a Valentine's Day hut ski adventure. The trip in was under threatening skies, but after a snug, friendly, and warm evening in the hut the group awoke Sunday morning to beautiful clear views of Rainier, Adams, and St. Hellions.

Spring is a special time for OSAT. Just like the trillium and avalanche lilies, we emerge from the winter fresh with enthusiasm for life and a readiness to bring joy and excitement to anyone who happens to be in our vicinity. OSAT's second birthday was celebrated as its first, with the return of the Thursday Tiger meeting to the summit at the start of Daylight Savings Time. Dave N amazed everyone by showing up at the summit with a decorated cake. The third year of Tiger meetings also saw more and more people using the trail directly up from the cul de sac, as the regular trail was under repair. It also marked the emergence of theft problems at the trailhead.

Terri St began the Meadowdale Park Beach Monday evening meetings that spring. This was the predecessor to the current Carkeek Park meeting. Terri has set a seemingly unmatchable longevity record as an OSAT meeting chair -- Thanks, Terri for your years (and years, and years) of service to OSAT. Dick and Theresa also resumed the Lake 22 meetings that spring.

The third annual climbing class welcomed 13 "rookies" to climbing and to the club. With substantially fewer students, the class was a bit less formal in 1993, but included 3 ice axe arrest field trips and lots of personal instruction. The main Mt. Si trail was closed for the first half of the 1993 hiking season, so we all became more familiar with other conditioning climbs off I-90: the old Si trail, Tenneriffe, McClellan, Bandera, and Granite.

Camp Kitchen

Sole Food...

I recently moved into a new home and was amazed at how much "stuff" I had accumulated over the last eight years. The idea of packing up the contents of my house and moving them, box by box, was overwhelming. I began to take bags of stuff to the Salvation Army, the Good Will, PHD, consignment stores, Mom and Dad's.... I thought how nice it would be to have less stuff. Kind of like the feeling you get half way up the mountain when the pack is feeling REALLY heavy and you wonder why you thought you had to bring.....

Well, I managed to lighten my load and pack up all the things "I really needed" quite in advance of the day of the move. Then when I decided to make peanut butter cookies for a hike to Wallace Falls with Lori M, I couldn't find the meat mallet, which I use to make the depressions in the cookies. I did, however, know where my hiking boots were. The toe of the boot made wonderful designs in the cookies.

The hike was fun, and the cookies were delicious. This is the best peanut butter cookie recipe in the world! Sweet and salty, crunchy and chewy, and packed with energy.

Wallace Falls Peanut Butter Bootprint Cookies

8 tbsps (1 stick) unsalted butter, at room temperature
 1/2 cup chunky peanut butter
 3/4 cup (packed) light brown sugar
 2 tbsps maple syrup
 1 egg, lightly beaten
 1 tsp vanilla extract
 1 1/2 cup unbleached all-purpose flour
 3/4 tsp baking soda
 1/2 cup salted peanuts, coarsely chopped

1. Preheat oven to 375 degrees
2. In a mixer bowl, cream the butter, peanut butter, and brown sugar together until light. Then beat in the maple syrup, egg, and vanilla.
3. In another bowl, toss the flour with the baking soda and peanuts. Slowly beat this into the liquid ingredients.
4. Drop the mixture by rounded tablespoonfuls, 3 inches apart, on baking sheets. Flatten them slightly with a meat mallet (or vibram-soled hiking boot, whichever is available). Bake until pale golden, 7 to 8 minutes. Remove the cookies from the baking sheets and cool on a wire rack. Makes 2 dozen cookies.

Drink, and the gang drinks with you;

Swear off, and you go it alone;

For the barroom bum who drinks your rum

Has a quenchless thirst of his own.

Feast, and your friends are many;

Fast, and they cut you dead;

They'll not get mad if you treat them bad,

So long as their stomach is fed.

Steal, if you get a million,

For then you can furnish bail;

It's the great big thief that gets out on leave;

While the little one goes to jail.

Aren't weekends for resting?

by Roy O.

The weekend of March 14th & 15th was anything BUT restful for this OSATer. Saturday started with an early morning gathering at the North Bend McDonalds.

Then Ron lead new & used OSAT members on a little hike up Mailbox Peak. I had looked forward to assisting

Ron on this Climbing Course Conditioning hike because I had never been up Mail Box and I had heard tales of steep terrain and beautiful views. But as we started out, the trail wandered through a pleasant, mossy forest and I said to myself, "This is really nice, those reports I had heard must have been exaggerated!"

Then Ron stopped from his fast pace to announce that he would take a break at a nice flat spot along the trail. It was the LAST flat spot for the next couple of hours.

Indeed, from there the trail went up at a steep pitch, zigzagging up and up. Once we arrived at the base of the boulder field for lunch. Everyone was ready for a break. And what a view of the Valley below!

After we arrived back at the cars, I realized that the soreness in my muscles was probably just beginning.

The next morning was the 4 mile St Patrick's Day Dash in downtown Seattle.

Congratulations to Doug, Wayne, Jason, Dave, Merry, Tim & I for finishing this event along with 15,000 other runners. After finishing, I hurried home for a quick shower and lunch.

Then it was off to the Mountains once again! A large group of crazy OSATer were waiting at the North Bend McDonalds for yet another vigorous climb.

This time our goal was Rattlesnake Ridge.

Most of us had either come directly from the Tiger Mountain meeting or the St. Patrick's Day Dash! What a bunch of nuts! I was joined by Doug, Winton, Patty H, Heather, Diane, Tom M, Bill L, Nancy M., Vaughn, Teri P. & Jonathan.

My already aching muscles didn't get any rest as Tom M. took off at his usual superhuman pace! Thanks to Tom for showing us the way. The effort was, of course, well worth it. We were rewarded with a spectacular view down to Rattlesnake Lake and beyond. There is even a rock crevasse up there. Does anyone remember how to do a Z-pulley? Needless to say, I slept very well that night.

Well, that was it for the weekend. Thankfully, I was able the walk again the next morning and look forward to the next restful (NOT!) weekend running the Mercer Island Half Marathon.

OUT OF AFRICA

By Sandy A (copy of a letter written to a good friend)

Dear Janet,

My last night in Africa. No postcard - I need to give you word pictures.

This trip was not just a vacation for me; it was a religious experience. Well, maybe 'spiritual' is a better word.

Trekking the high plains of Kilimanjaro - alone except for my African guide - on Christmas Eve morning. Hiking down through the tropical rain forest on Christmas Day, a couple of us singing Walking Through a Winter Wonderland in the warm mist. Lush banana/coffee plantations with throngs of Africans returning from church in their Sunday best. Passing by unpainted hovels and brightly painted juke joints.

Kilimanjaro was a 6 day walk. We took the Machame route up and the Mweke route down. The guides call it the Whiskey route vs. the Coca-Cola route that is more commonly used. Appropriate for our group! The Machame route is more scenic, longer and supposedly more difficult.

It was strange. The first day was through tropical rain forest. Muddy slogging and if you looked down at your feet it seemed like any hike in Western Washington. Then you look up and whoa! Vines and moss and tropical tree ferns and bromeliads and wild impatiens and bizarre trees.

Alpine foliage began to show up later. Since we walked in the clouds and mist most of the time it was still much like being in the Cascades - until, once again, you looked up or out of the corner of your eye and caught sight of some exotic plants in the middle of normal alpine foliage.

84 kilometers over six days and nobody was sore. Something to be said for the tropics.

The beauty of the land of the Serengeti plains is indescribable. People go to see the animals and it is truly amazing to see mixed herds of zebras, wildebeests, gazelles roaming for miles. Or to look over at some particularly beautiful valley and say "oh, some more giraffes". Or to climb a tree on top of a hill at camp and see not only the dawn but a small band of elephants in the distance. But the land itself is what I see in my mind's eye. And the stars and the Milky Way at three am with a warm breeze blowing, pointing out constellations as we gaze in wonder and contentment.

What a sense of peace. We went from the trails and vistas and rainclouds of Kilimanjaro to the plains of the Serengeti to the white sand beaches of Zanzibar.

Whitewashed, stone thatched-roof cottages and buildings were the Palm Beach Inn where we stayed in Zanzibar. In the fishing village of Bwejuu. No stores. No traffic. No real roads. Up at dawn again, playing in the Indian Ocean. Watching the sun rise and the fisherman pole their wooden boats out beyond the reef.

I saw one TV in the Africa I visited (and about half dozen flush toilets).

Maasai roam the countryside tending their cattle and their goats. The towns are poor. The people of Tanzania are strong. (There are no hard core mountaineers in Seattle. When you can climb to 20,000 feet in sandals and old tennis shoes and rags, with no water, carrying 60-70 pounds in a plastic bag on your head and then cook dinner over a wood stove after you've gathered wet wood --- then you are hard core.)

There are no fat Africans in the countryside.

Denny Creek

By Rob C

Saturday, Feb. 14 - As part of the OSATSKI Backcountry Ski Course, an intrepid crew composed of Rich H., Chris X (I don't know his last initial), Rob C., and Charley W. skied to Rob's cabin near Denny Creek, and from there to the top of Sncqualmie Pass and back. The weather started out drizzly, tending towards snow showers as we approached the pass about 10:00AM, and turning to honest-to-goodness rain as we skied back down. There was plenty of snow on the old highway, and the recent blanketing protected our skis from the ravages of the DOT-produced sand layers that emanate from I-90. The few switchbacks along the road provided some opportunities to practice traversing snowy hillsides. The consensus seemed to be that next year, this trip should be done earlier in the season (or minus El Nin~o), and that it should be an overnighter so we can take a stab at some of the other trails in the area. Also, we gotta remember to bring tea bags. :-)

LONGMIRE SNOWSHOE OUTING

By Will A

It appeared we would be experiencing some moisture as we entered the park. Some of our car load were still sleeping, they didn't see the three inches of moss that had grown on the trees in the last week. But as always, the optimistic group we are, we looked forward to another Excellent OSAT Adventure. Originally we had planned to go to Paradise and snowshoe but the gate was closed due to avalanche and not to open till 11.00 so we opted for plan "b". Most of the 25 or so that came headed north for Rampart Ridge via the Wonderland Trail. A few others said they would catch up with us and a couple others went up the Nisqually River a ways.

As we headed up Rampart we didn't need the shoes and a few of us were saying "is that rain or just wet snow?" During the first hour or so we got stretched out along the trail. Nearing the top of the ridge we all found the sign marking the cut off to Van Trump Park and Mildred Point. We continued North/northwest. We were now at about 3800 ft., the snow was deeper, and the light in the woods was very flat. We decided to put our snowshoes on. The trail rolled up and down a little and some of us went off trail to get in the deeper stuff. The snow in Washington is mostly not powder. Most of us were using small to medium sized aluminum and synthetic snowshoes. Several people had the MSR style that seemed to work just fine. The type of snowshoes you may need on one day may be different on another day.

They are kind of like skis once you get into it. Longer ones for powder and shorter ones for mashed potatoes. Anyway, then the trail headed down. At this point our group of about six was last in line due to snowshoe technical difficulties. Along the way thru a flat spot I checked with one of the others about our general direction and also checked my compass. I had that feeling, but we were following the main group. Not too much longer we rounded a bend and found our group standing in a creek bed. The general consensus was the we had missed a turn and needed to further get our bearings. We spotted some other snowshoers who confirmed this with us.

We were now having a look at Kautz Creek. Some of us want to go back there and go to Pyramid Creek Camp. Indian Henry's can also be accessed from this route. This could be a good day hike in the summer. Well, after a closer look at Kautz Creek via falling of a log bridge, I suggested we head back and try to meet up with our other groups as we had made a rendezvous time. Once we had found the switchback we had missed, some of the group went the long way and some of us went the short way. We all met back at Longmire and eventually had coffee, hot chocolate, chili, french fries and desserts at the Longmire Lodge Restaurant. I think most everyone had a good time, my nephews did ask me if I was the leader of the outing, I looked at them quizzically. Thanks again to everyone that came and made this an OSAT Adventure.

P.S. Snowshoes can be rented for about $15.00 a weekend at most outdoor supply stores.

Experienced that not all snowshoes fit all types of boots, try them at the store.

Regarding that missed turn, it was very easy to do that day. If there was a trail marker it was buried or missing. The flat light made it hard to determine direction. And we were having fun. Group consensus: if you go out in the snow, know the trail and or take a couple friends and always take the ten essentials.

The Annual OSAT Snowcave Adventure

by Patty H

Thirteen hardy (foolhardy?) OSATers met at Dan's in Sultan for a big breakfast, then headed up to the pass. Twelve sets of snowshoes and one set of skis decked out with skins—and one I snow board strapped to Charlies' pack—up we went.

We arrived at "Cave Hollow" and went to work—moleman Joe was not to see the light of day again for hours! Tom was giving tours of his bachelor pad (Leah's broken arm kept here from making the trip this year. I think I heard here saying "Oh, dam!" as she drove away from breakfast). Tom's cave was split-level—living room with couch on the lower level—sleeping quarters up above.

Dave and Rik ended up with a garage/garden room off their sleeping area—a cool ice blue color. Their neighbors on the right had a nice "cozy" bungalow feel to their cave. A major dwelling up on the hill had multi-level sleeping platforms thanks to the flexibility we showed (using the principles of the program!0 in working around unplanned boulders cropping up and a Jules Verne-like cavern descending clear to the center of the earth!

The Social center cave where we had our packed (13 person) candle-lit meeting was welcoming and spacious.

Those who got their work done early went for a walk-about up the rock outcropping to the west. We all enjoyed the snow-laden trees, had our dinners and once again enjoyed the fellowship around the traditional presto log fire below the "OSAT" snow sculpture with fireworks for our evening entertainment.

The meeting followed with Valentine cards and candy making the rounds. The count was taken of first-time snow cavers, earning their "merit badges" (fictitious) and a quote of Jimmy Hinkhouse' was remembered for those returning snow-cavers—"Some are sicker than others!"

After the meeting some retired to their bags, some went up to Rik and Dave's to play cards, some went up to enjoy the remains of the fire and some went off on night time walks.

The report in the morning seemed to be that everyone got some sleep. There was light snow all night long, so we ate our various breakfasts in the gentle snow. (Sean and Doug feasting on eggs and bacon and hashbrowns—I smelled Joe's espresso but couldn't get myself out of the snuggly warm bag).

The industrious went off to learn the secrets of using an avalanche beacon and the rest of us sat around and watched the snow fall.

A beautiful trip out through the winter wonderland—a few mixed signals and a lot wallet slowed down our arrival back at Dan's restaurant (to have 'real' food and sit in chairs)!

Once again, another thoroughly enjoyable OSAT adventure. Thanks to all who participated. "Merit badge" recipients included bob, Charlie, Doug, Joe, Michaelann, Sean, Will. "Those Sicker than Others" were Bill, Dave, Patty, Rik, Roy and Tom.

'The relationship of height to spirituality is not merely metaphorical, it is physical reality. The most spiritual people of this planet live in the highest places. So do the most spiritual flowers...I call the high and light aspects of my being spirit and the dark and heavy aspect soul. Soul is at home in the deep shadowed valleys. Spirit is a land of high, white peaks and glittering jewel-like lakes and flowers...People need to climb the mountain not simply because it is there, but because the soulful divinity needs to be mated with spirit.'
